

Mariya Lobacheva is program director at Kazakhstan NGO Echo. Her work includes managing a research and advocacy strategy to promote transparency and citizen participation. She has been working on the implementation of the EITI in Kazakhstan for 19 years, several times represented civil society on the Kazakhstan MSG and continues to advise CS MSG members on the implementation of the EITI Standard. Mariya has carried out several analytical works related to the extractive sector's influence on the local population, as well as civic participation in income management at the subnational level. She has been a consultant and mentor to a number of organizations and activists working on issues of transparency and accountability in the extractive sector. Mariya currently represents the Civil society constituency at the EITI Board.